Swedish verbs are not adapted according to person, but stay the same, regardless of whom they're referring to. Another characteristic of Swedish verbs is that they only have one present tense form: there isn't really an equivalent to the English -ing ending. This means you would literally say, "I go now."

In Swedish, these are known as “partikelverb” and the stress is going to be on the particle, not the verb. So now that you know a bit more about phrasal verbs, let’s take a look at one set of phrasal verbs. While you can obviously group phrasal verbs by the particle or preposition, I’ve decided to focus on the verb. Today’s phrasal verb?
